

"Click at your own peril"

James J. Giszczak | Tuesday, August 1, 2017

Some of the world's most vicious criminals are lurking in your office. Maybe not in a nearby cubicle, but most certainly in your email inbox. And if you or a co-worker were to click one of those unassuming links or attachments, your entire business could be compromised.

Already this year, major ransomware events have paralyzed businesses across the globe, and cybersecurity experts say these criminals are getting bolder by the day, so it's more important than ever to be vigilant.

To read James Giszczak's insight, click here.

James J. Giszczak