Representative Cases/Matters

- Lead litigation defense counsel in a complex commercial litigation for an entrepreneur, his spouse and his business who were being sued for tens of millions of dollars. After discovery, Alex prepared a dispositive motion and argued that plaintiffs' own evidence showed they engaged in a fraud that mandated dismissal. The complaint was dismissed.
- Represented a well-known rock-and-roll band in a multi-week trial. A successful settlement was reached for Alex's clients right before closing arguments, a settlement prompted by the opposing party himself. After notifying the trial court of the settlement, the Jury requested to speak with Alex. It was then when he learned that the jury, because of his cross-examination and presentation skills, gave him the nickname of "The Ninja."
- Lead litigation counsel in a non-compete enforcement action where former employees denied ever being presented with the non-compete clause. The former employees contended that their signature page was a separate, freestanding document, completely disconnected from the non-compete provisions on a prior page. Mr. Ayar was able to prove that the former employees were in fact presented with the non-compete provisions of the agreement, and that the former employees agreed to them, because when the former employees signed the agreement they did so by turning over the last page to lay it on top of all the prior pages of the agreement. As such, when the last page was signed, it left an impression on all of the pages underneath it, including the page containing the non-compete. The Court went on to enter an Order enforcing the non-compete.
- Lead litigation counsel in multiple construction litigation matters. In each case, Alex was able to efficiently obtain a favorable settlement on behalf of his client.
- Represented a well-known bank in successfully appointing a receiver to run a struggling business, which led to all damages being paid to the bank, including the bank's attorneys' fees.
Lead counsel for a direct Chinese manufacturer against a wind turbine company in a noteworthy email fraud case. Following discovery of a potential underlying scheme to defraud, Alex obtained a favorable settlement on behalf of his client.
- Lead litigation defense counsel for a notable former executive of a major automobile company in a contentious contract dispute. Prior to Alex's retention, litigation in the trial court had been ongoing for six years during which his future client was held in contempt of court, a bench warrant was issued for his immediate arrest and a judgment was entered against him for millions of dollars. Also prior to Alex's involvement, the Court of Appeals involuntarily dismissed his future client's claim of appeal. Once Alex was retained, he successfully convinced the Court of Appeals to reinstate the appeal. Alex then convinced the appellate court that the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. All orders, judgments and even the bench warrants issued against Alex's client were held to be void ab initio, unenforceable and vacated.

Alexander Ayar

- Convinced Oakland County Circuit Court case evaluation panel to award $750,000 in favor of a corporate client in an environmental matter.
- Lead litigation counsel for a medical billing company. After successfully obtaining decidedly valuable documents supporting his client's position, and effectively using those documents in multiple depositions, Alex was able to obtain a highly favorable settlement on behalf of his client
- Provided extensive assistance in brief writing and at oral argument on dispositive motion that convinced the court to award a multi-million dollar judgement to a corporate client, along with his costs and attorneys' fees in a complex environmental litigation matter.
- As lead litigation counsel, successfully convinced the Oakland County Circuit Court to grant a dispositive motion that dismissed a complex business tort action.
